

La creciente confianza hacia la policía

Juanjo Medina
(Universidad de Sevilla)

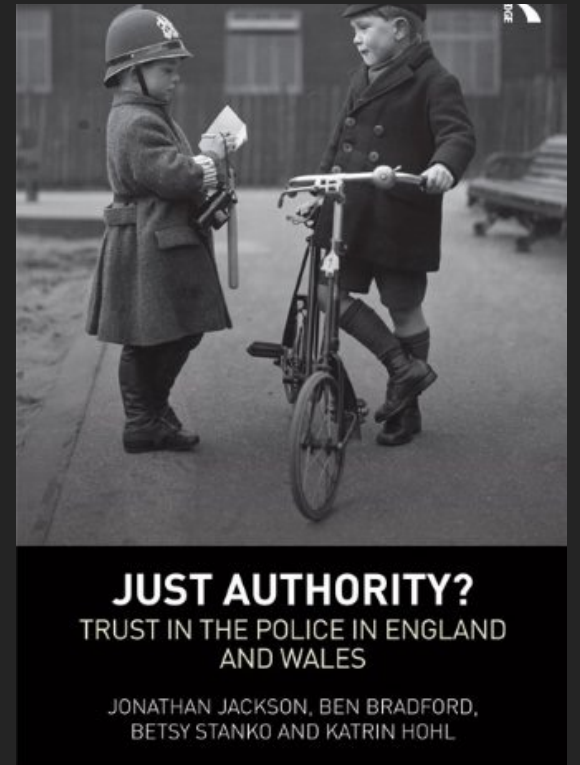

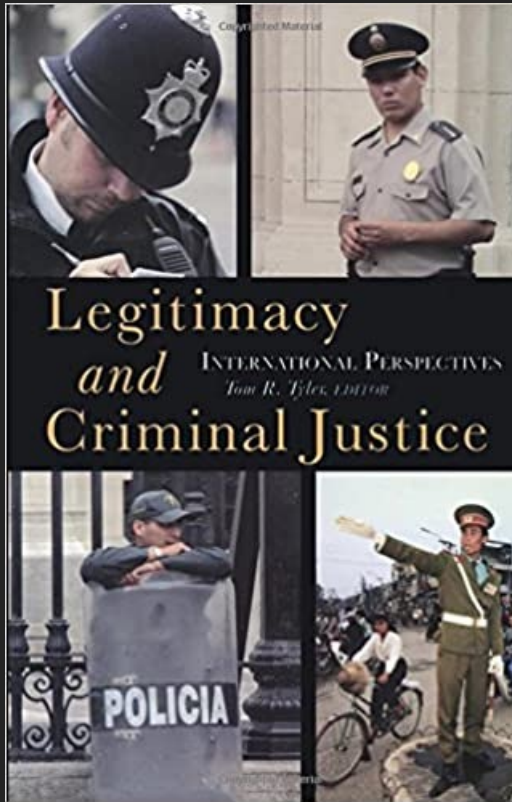

Medina, J. (2025, 28 de noviembre). [Presentación de conferencia] “La creciente confianza hacia la policía”
XII Congreso Andaluz de Sociología, Sevilla, España.

Contexto

Investigación comparada sobre el tema

Legitimidad y justicia procedimental como aspectos esenciales de una policía moderna

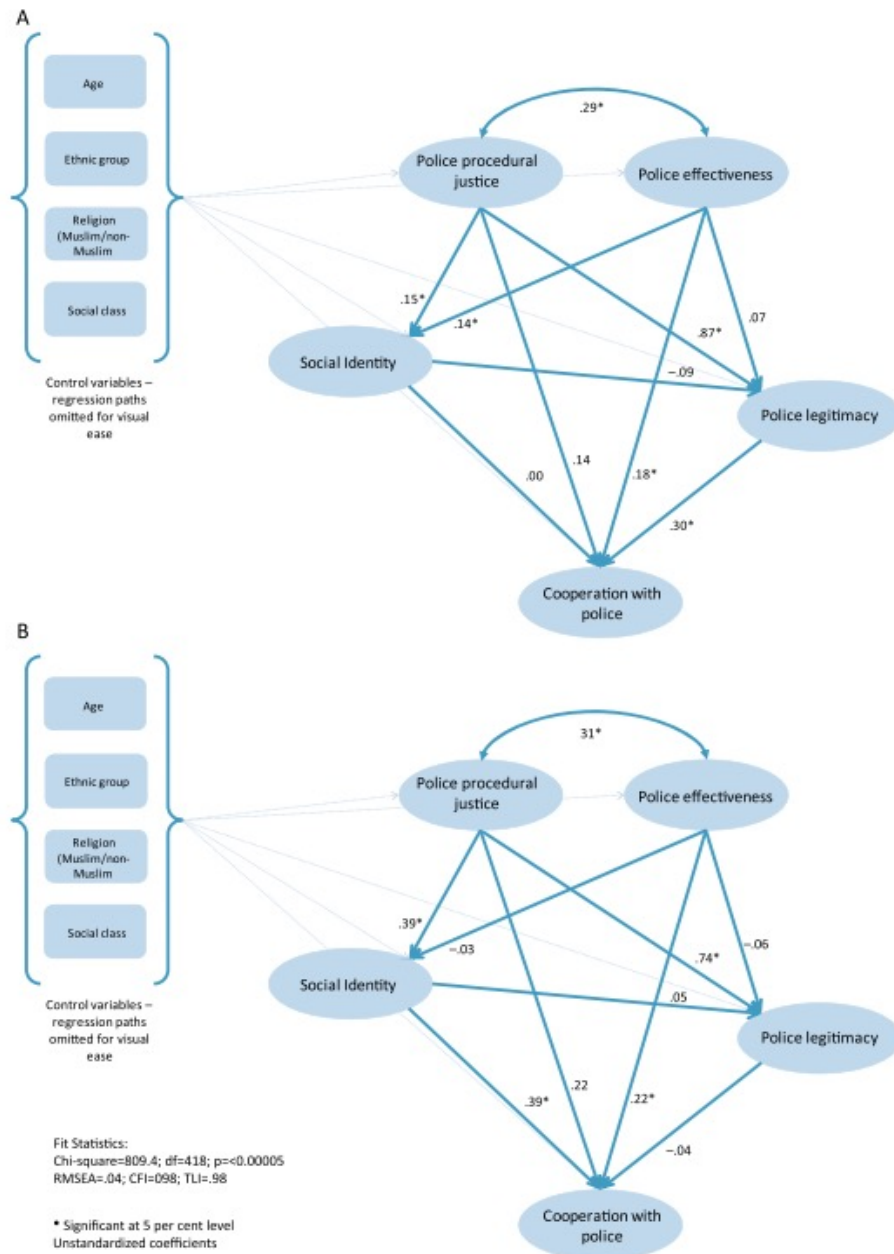

Estudio de las actitudes

- Campo de investigación desde la década de 1960, aunque en España esta mucho menos desarrollado que en otros países
- La mayoría de la gente tiene actitudes positivas hacia la policía, pero existen importantes diferencias entre grupos sociales
- Los análisis han buscado:
 - Explorar tendencias
 - Ver de que manera estas actitudes varían en distintos grupos sociales (generalmente minorías raciales tienen actitudes más negativas)
 - Entender los factores que pueden afectar estas actitudes
 - Desarrollar un entendimiento de las potenciales consecuencias de las mismas
 - Más recientemente han contribuido a promover particulares teorías y modelos de reforma policial

¿Confianza? ¿Legitimidad?

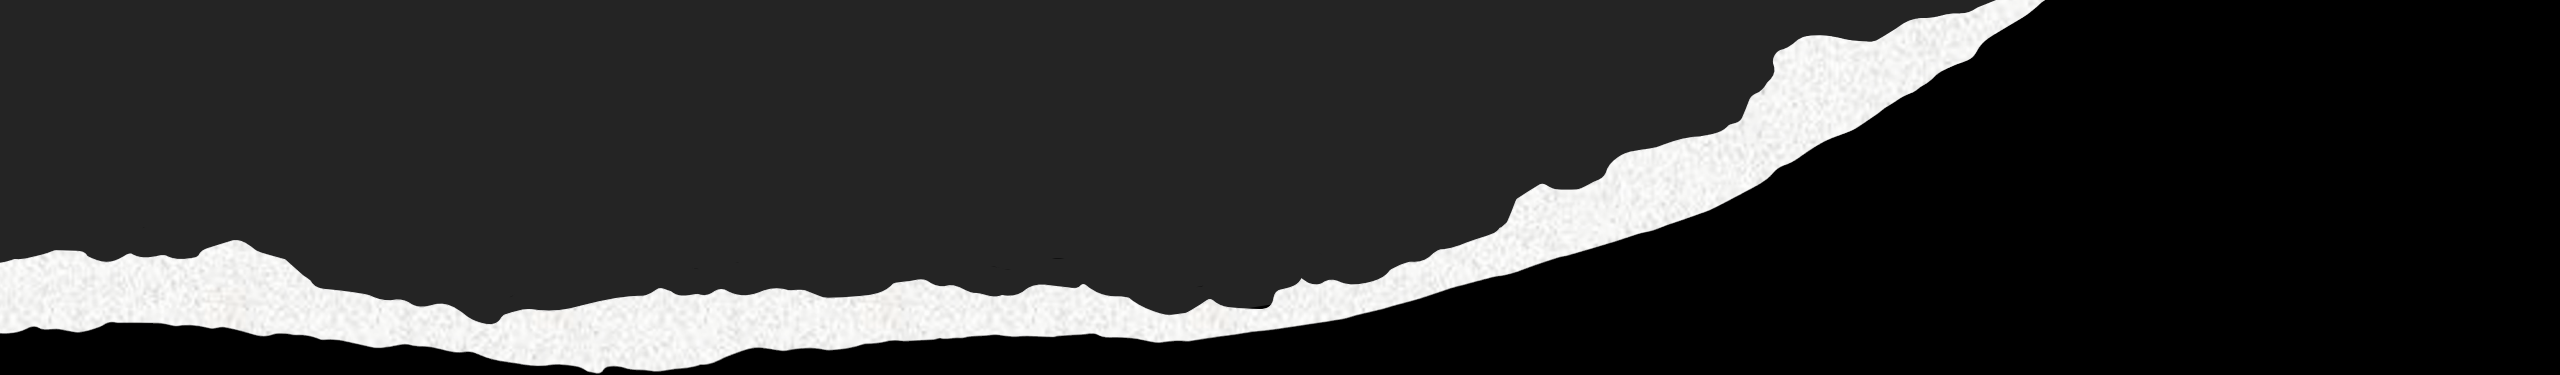

- Diversidad y ambigüedad terminológica (trust, confidence, legitimacy) que genera confusión
- Carácter multidimensional de estos conceptos
- El modelo de Bradford y Jackson: el énfasis en trustworthiness (las cualidades que hacen que la policía sea merecedora de respeto y confianza)
 - Tendría tres dimensiones: (1) confianza en efectividad policial, (2) en que trataran a la gente de una forma justa y equitativa, y (3) que tienen valores parecidos a los nuestros
 - Distinguen entre:
 - Confianza en la institución en sentido abstracto o global
 - Confianza en el contexto de encuentros e interacciones con la policía en situaciones concretas
 - Es relacional

Consecuencias

- Las actitudes están asociadas con comportamientos de colaboración con la policía
 - Actitudes negativas -> Menos cooperación con la policía (denunciando delitos, identificando sospechosos, actuando como testigos)
- Las actitudes también están asociadas con percepciones sobre la legitimidad de la policía:
 - Actitudes negativas -> Menor legitimidad de la institución policía
- Las actitudes también afectan la identidad social de los sujetos (sus sentimientos de pertenencia a la comunidad)
 - Tratamientos discriminatorios mandan el mensaje a los ciudadanos que no pertenecen y esto a su vez reduce la legitimidad policial
- Las actitudes finalmente también podrían tener un papel en favorecer la obediencia al derecho

Figure 2. (a) Full model predicting social identity and cooperation with the police (the UK group). (b) Full model predicting social identity and cooperation with the police (the non-UK group).

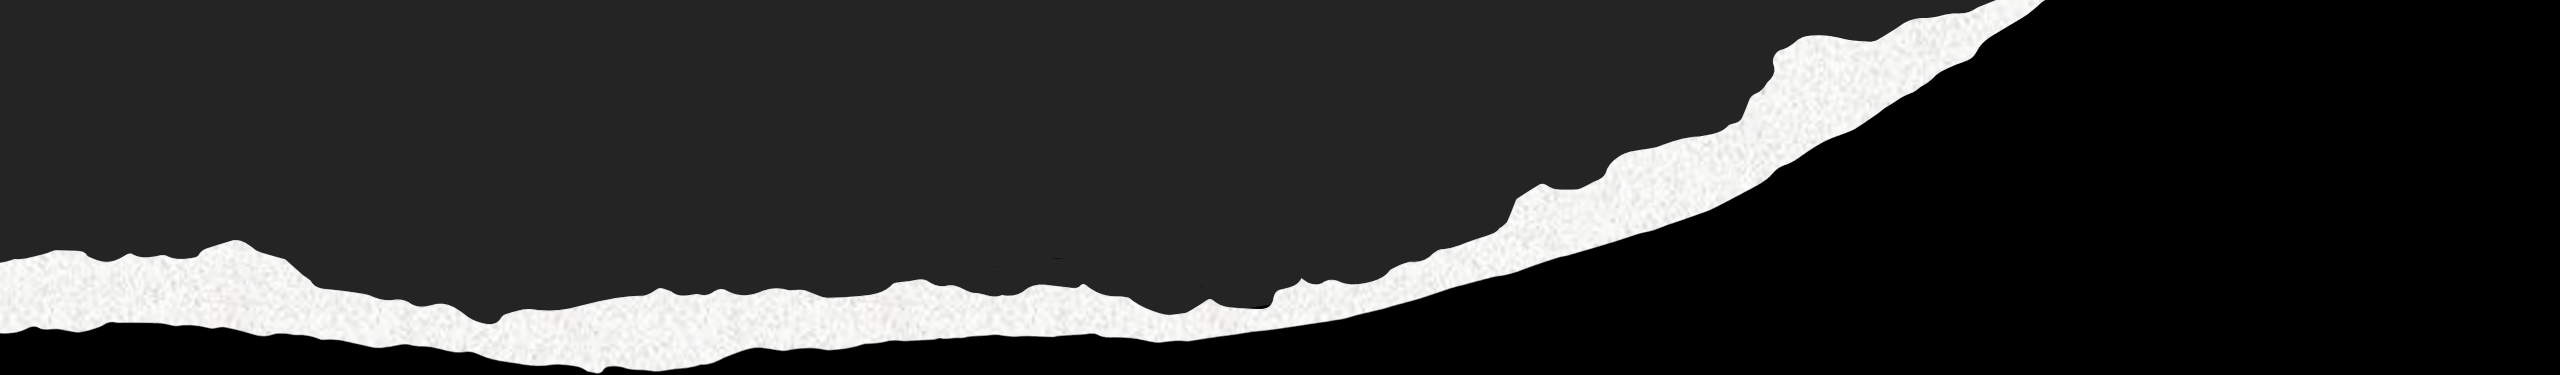

El Proyecto PolRef

Este estudio

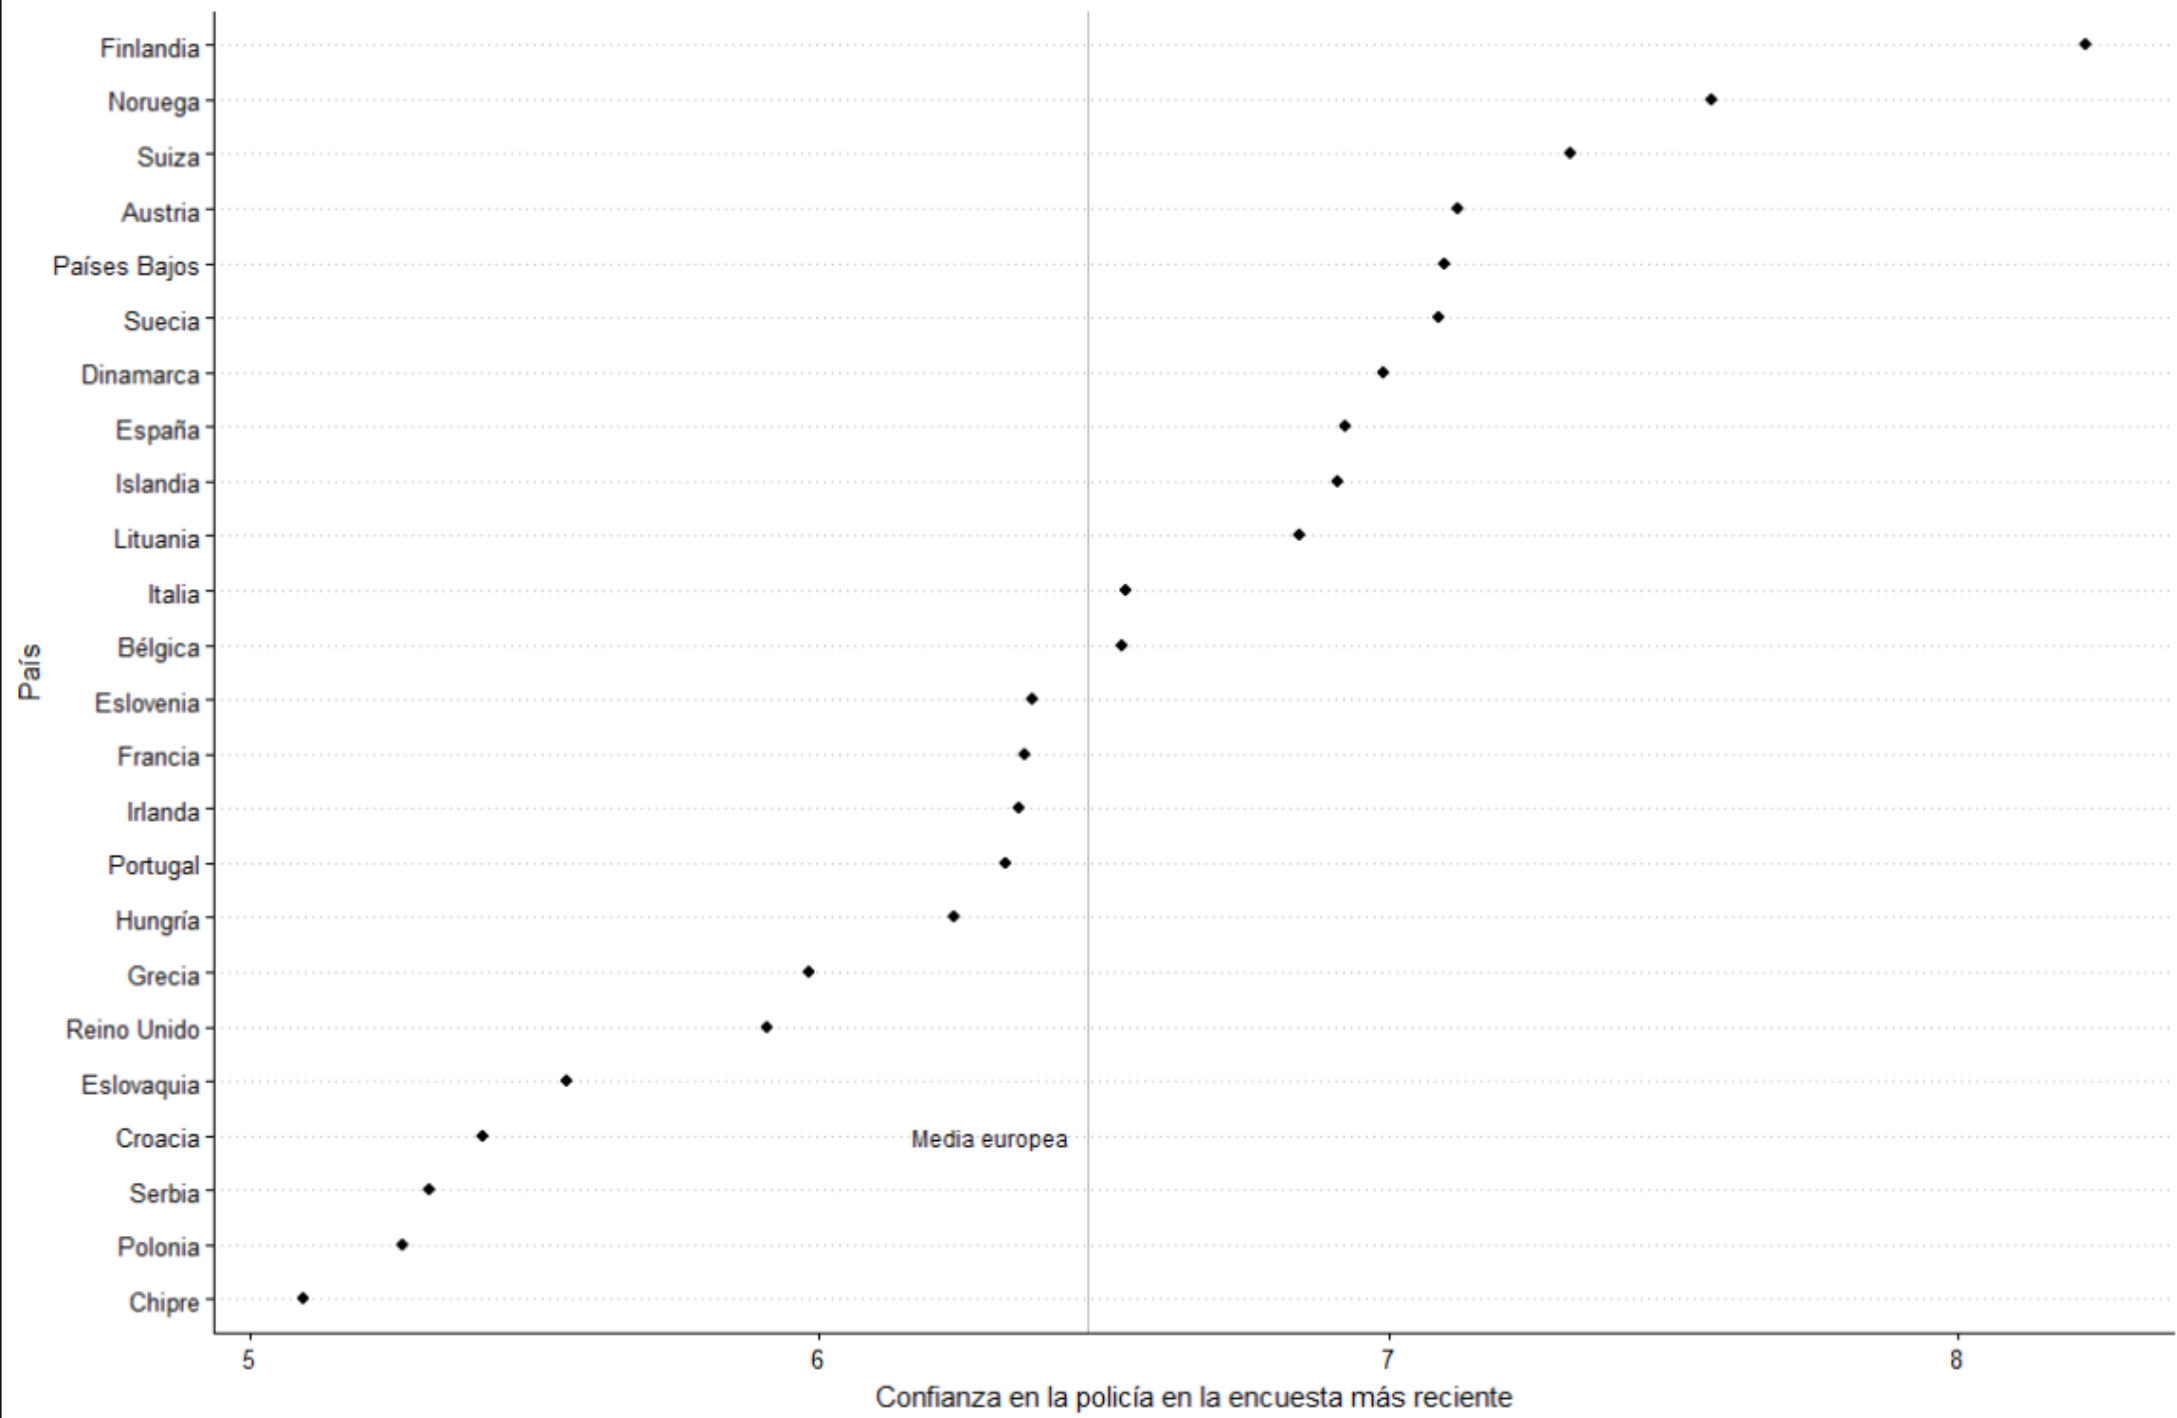

- Proyecto PolRef (CNS2022-135306)
 - Entrevistas en profundidad a mandos policiales, representantes sociales y políticos
 - Análisis de textos parlamentarios y políticos (programas electorales)
 - Análisis secundarios de datos (en particular ESS y el Latinobarometro) para evaluar tendencias en actitudes hacia la policía en España
 - Encuesta ad hoc con el panel online de Ipsos (trabajo de campo junio-julio 2025, n=2000)
- Proyecto financiado por las “Ayudas para incentivar la Consolidación Investigadora (CNS2022)” de la AEI (Financiado por la Unión Europea – NextGenerationEU/PRTR)

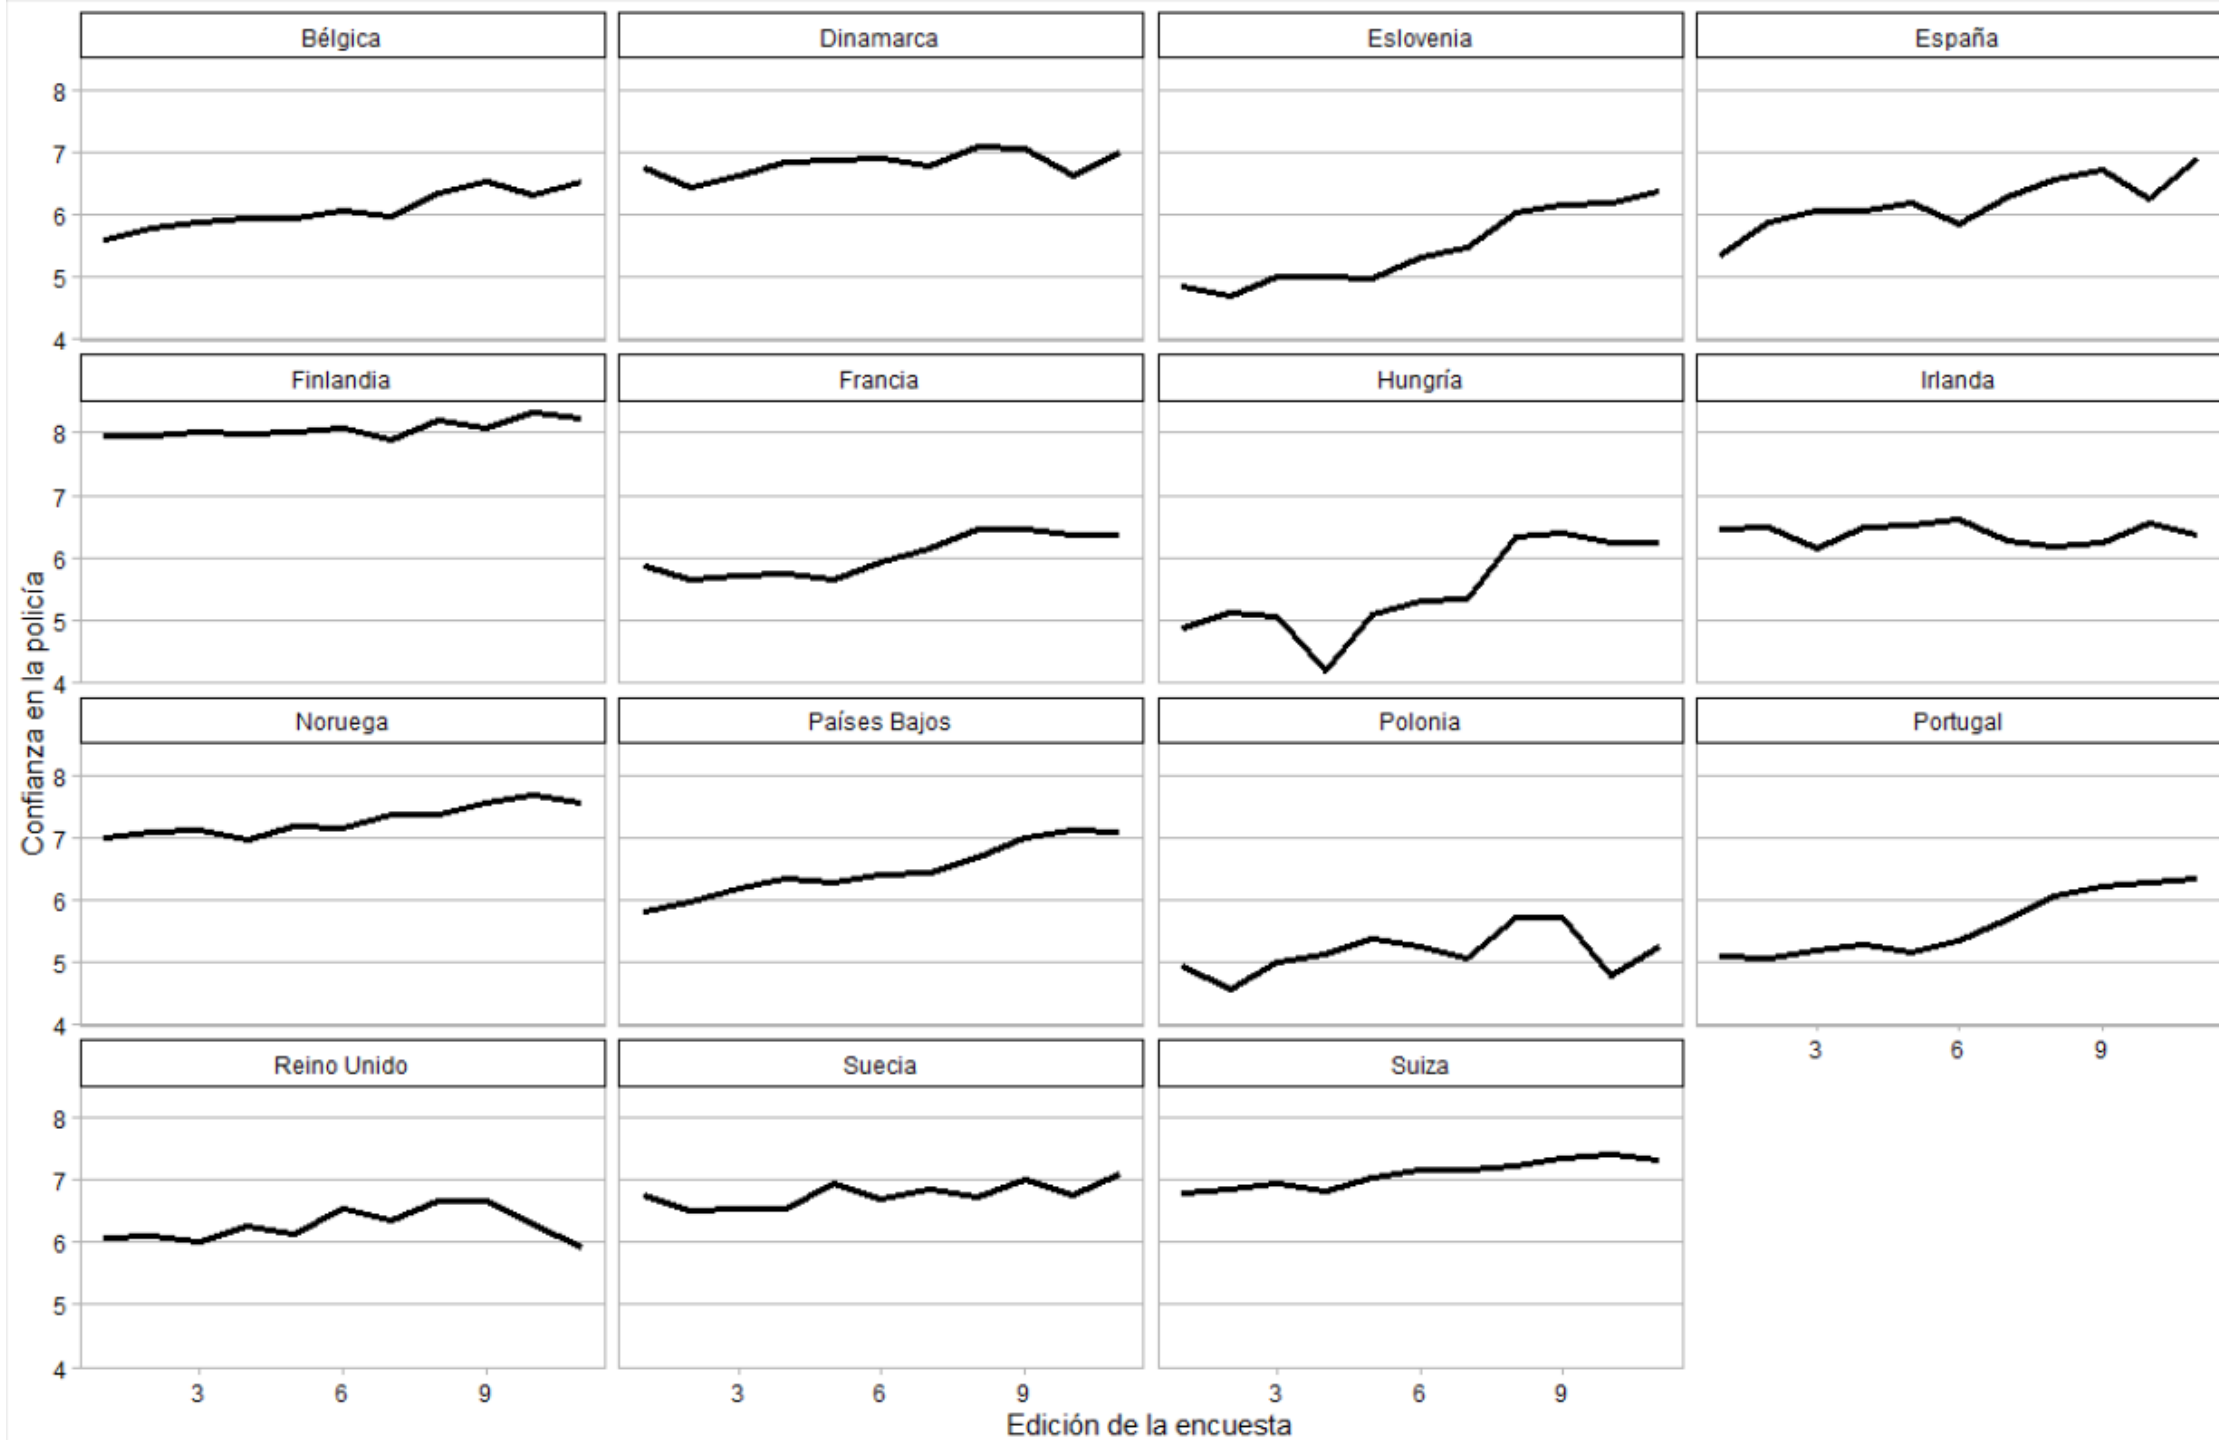

Hoy

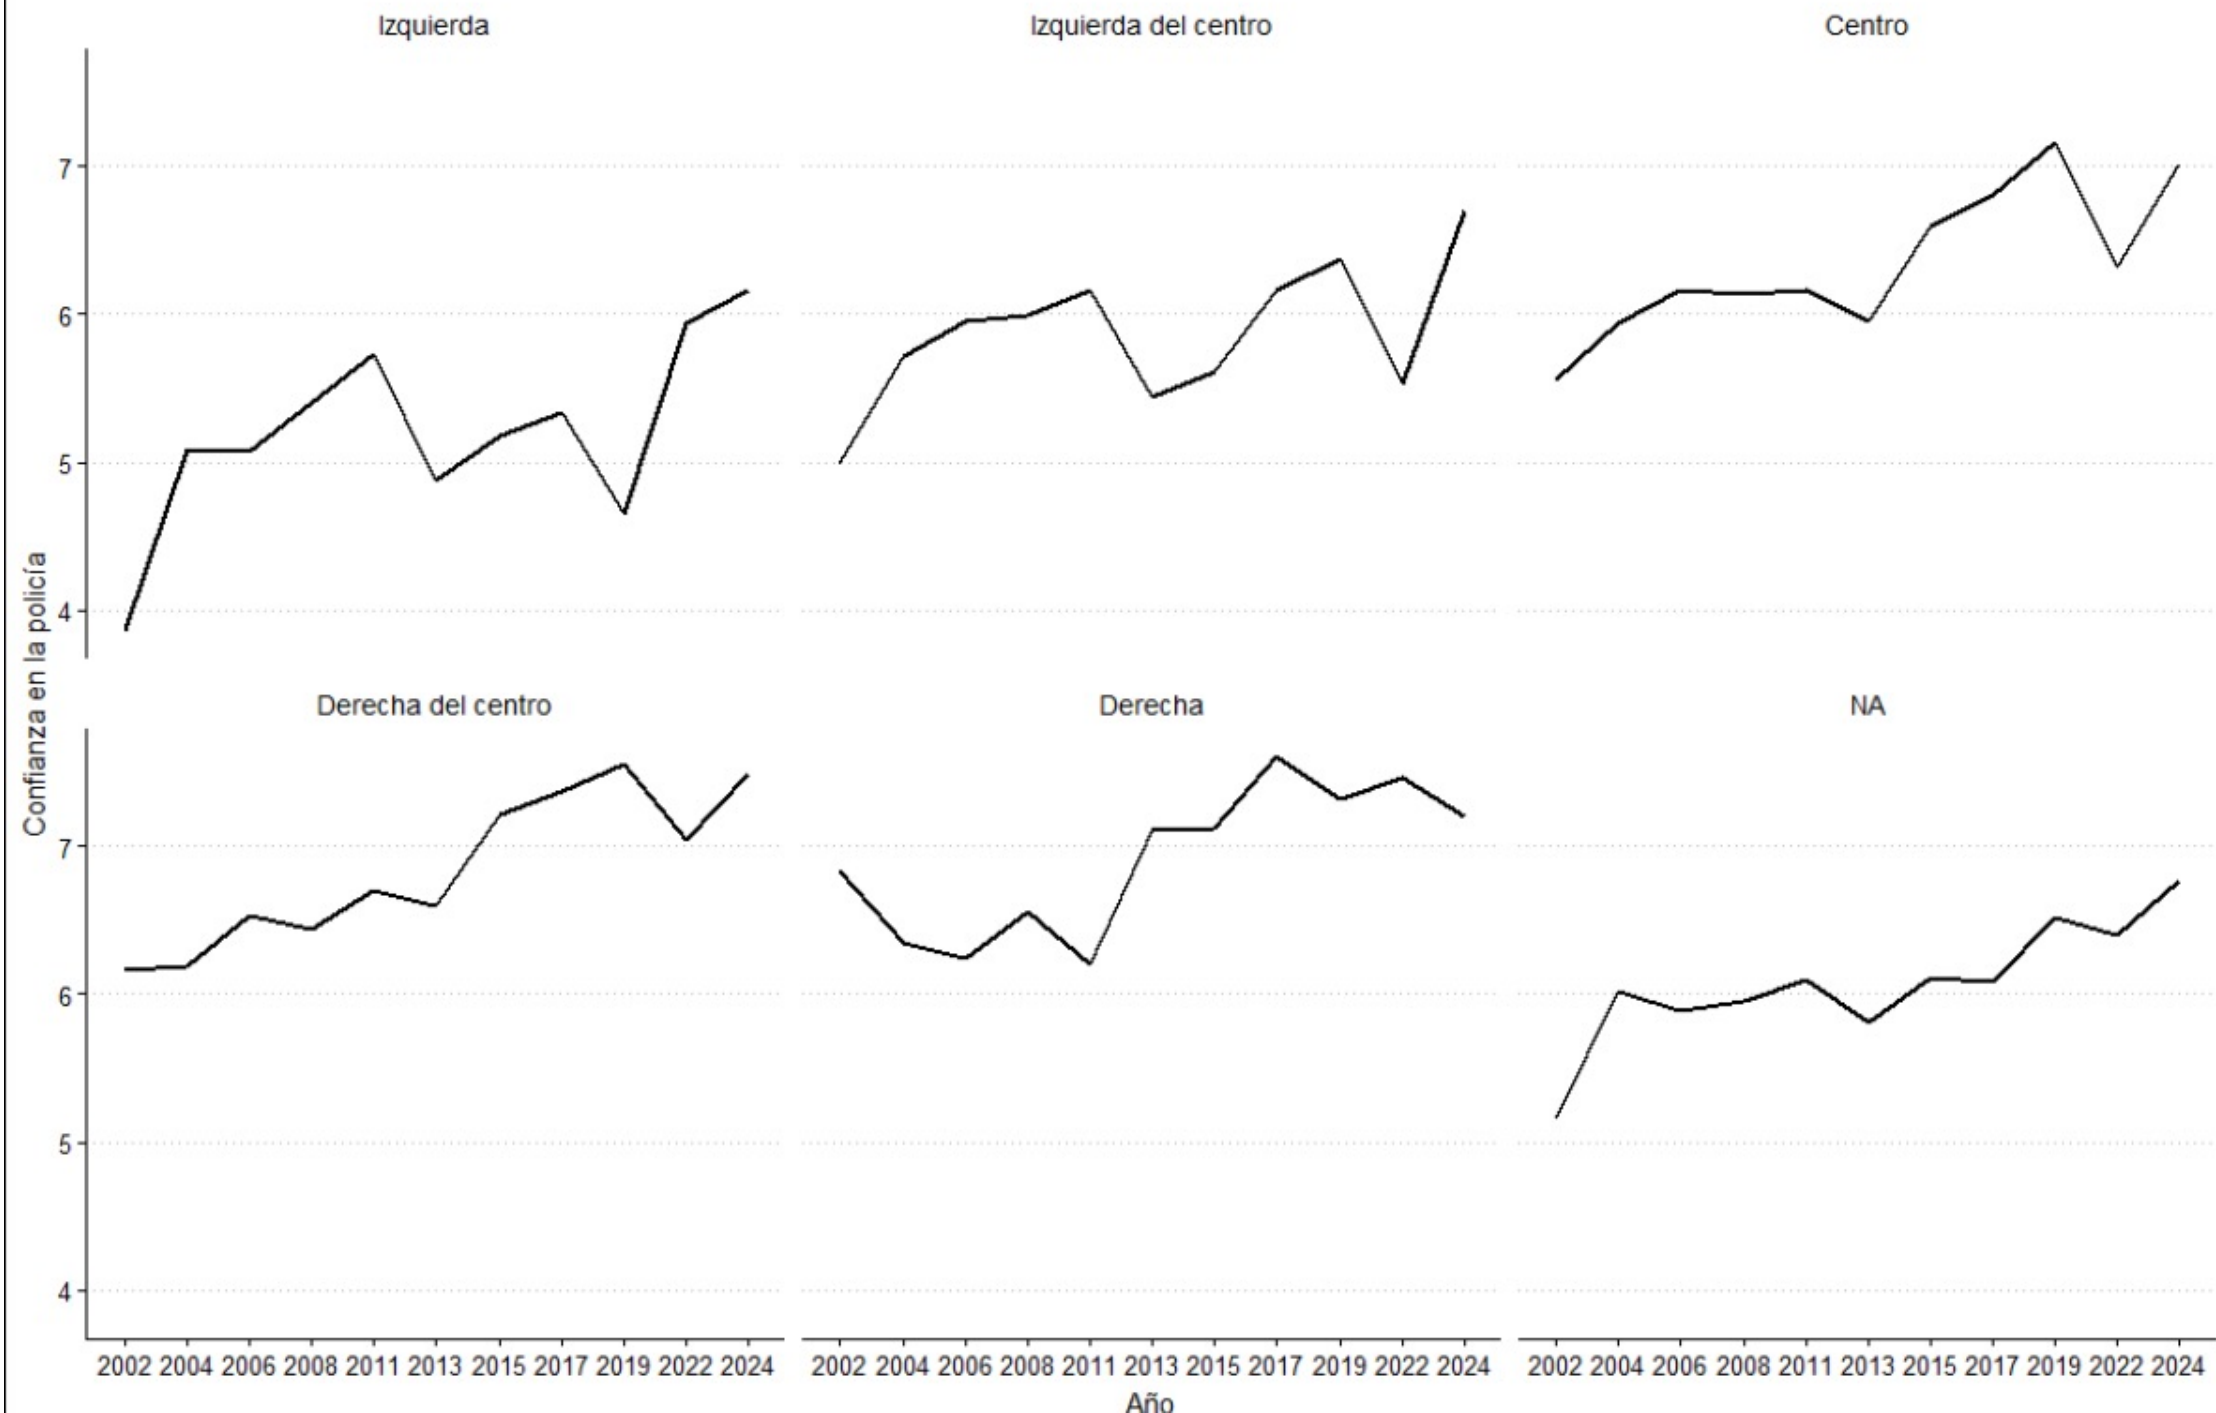

- Analisis descriptivos ponderados de la Encuesta Social Europea
- Análisis descriptivos ponderados examinando actitudes hacia la policía

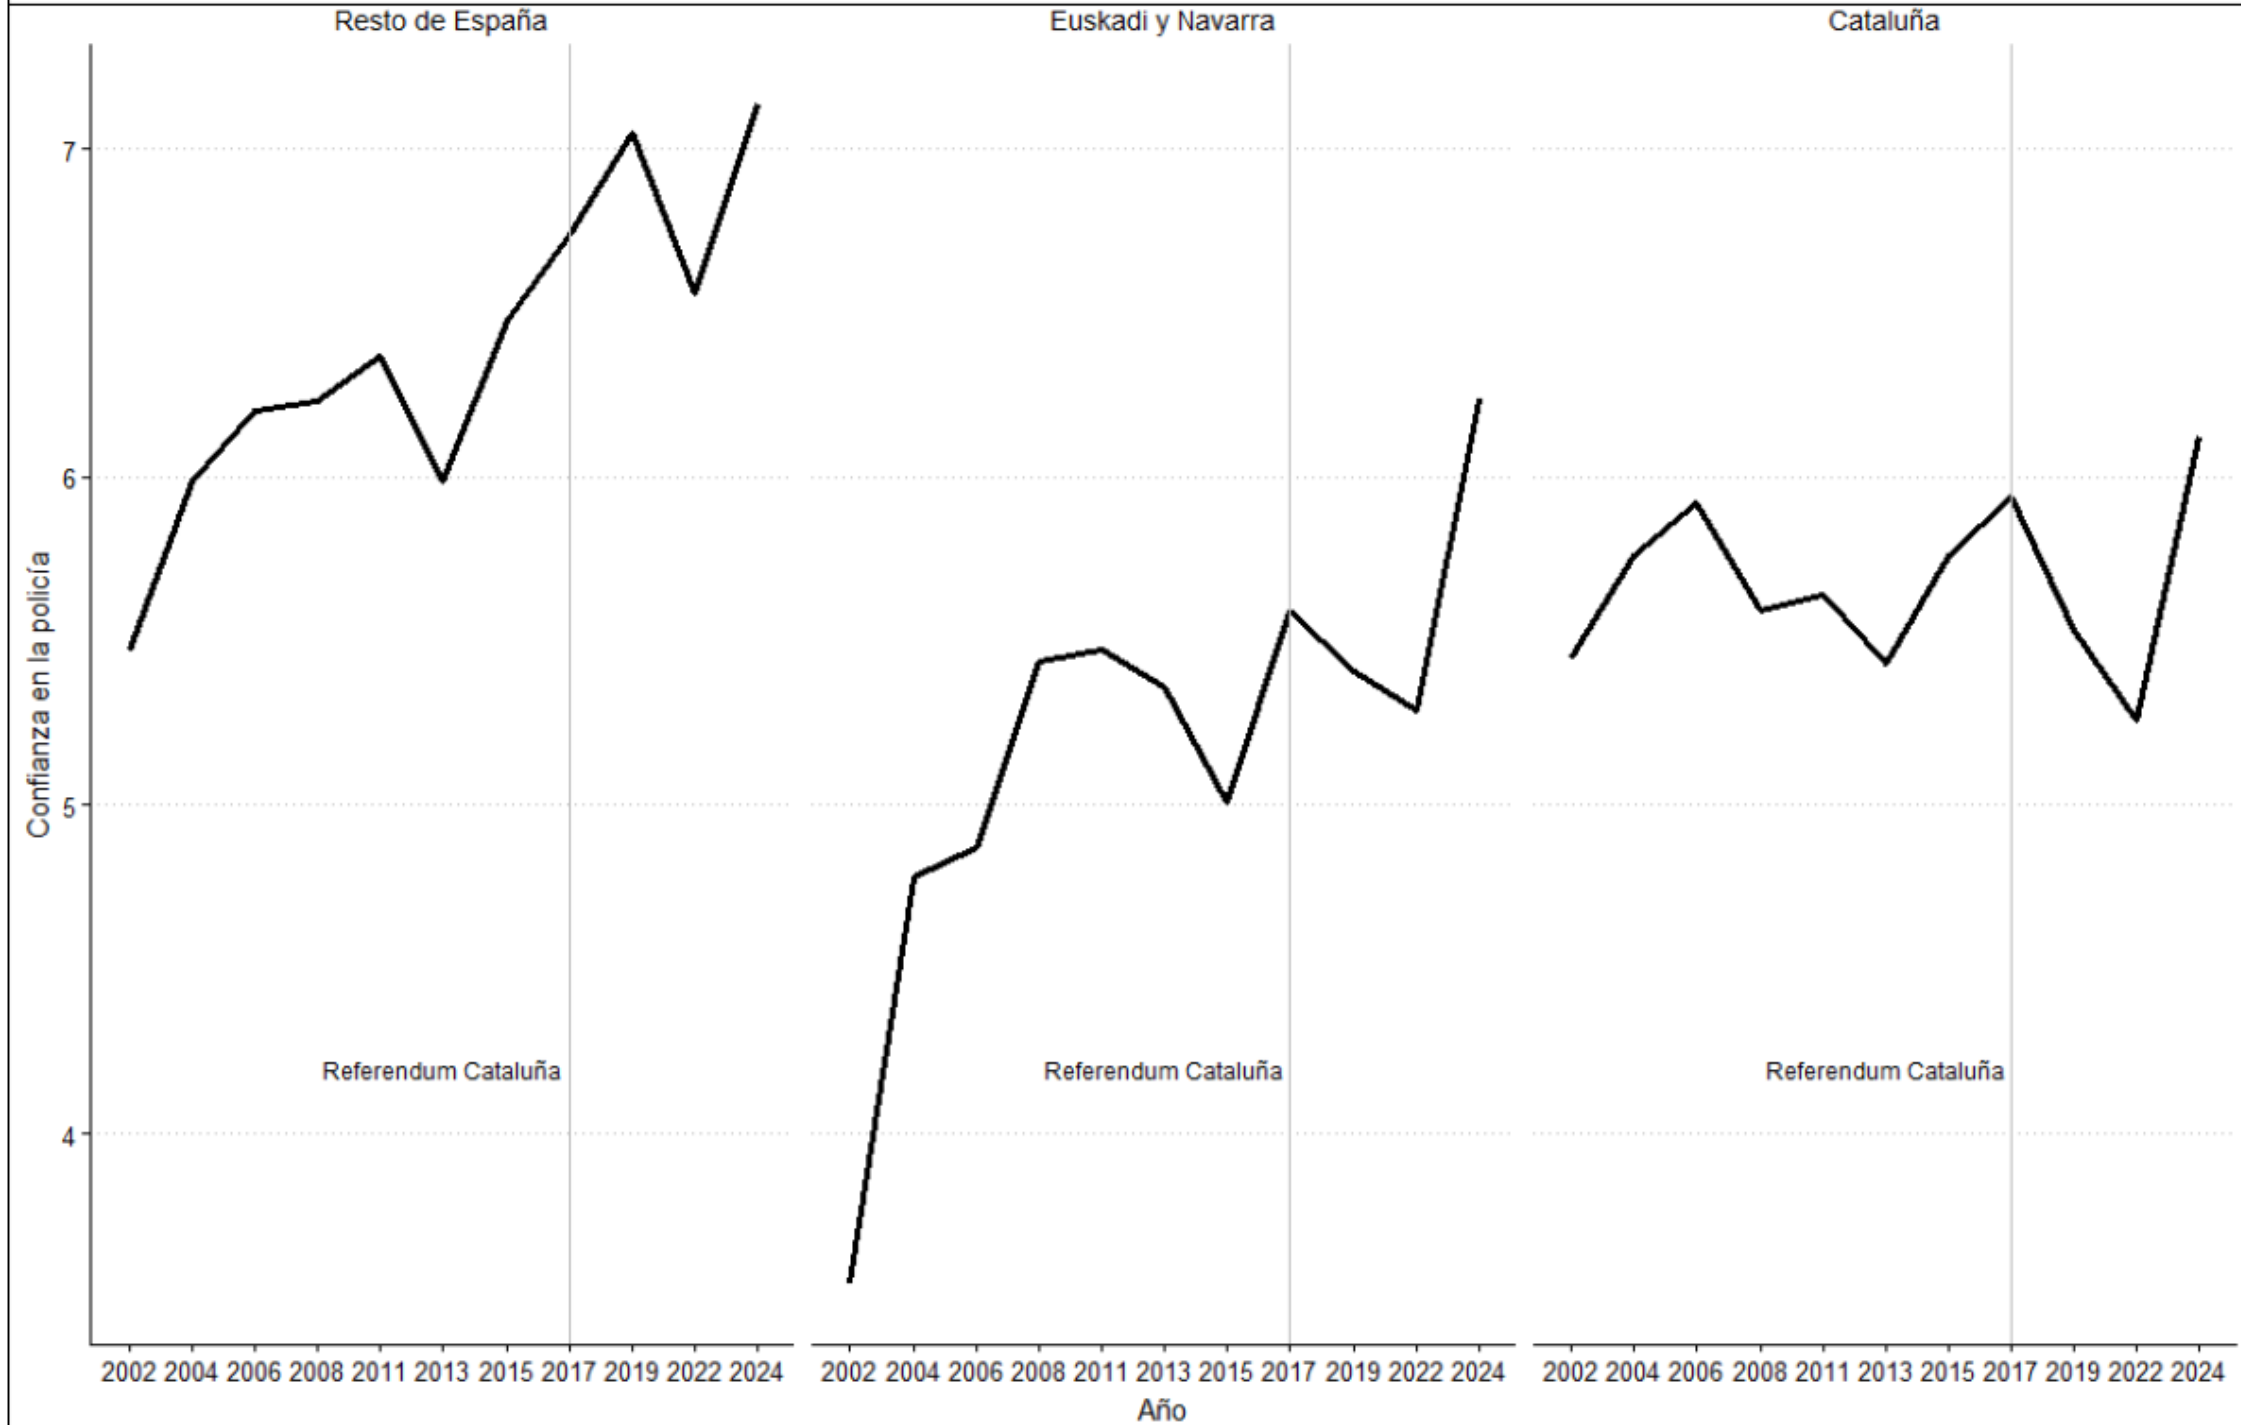

La European Social Survey

La encuesta PolRef

Vulnerability & Policing Futures
Research Centre

HomeAbout ▾Research ▾PublicationsOpportunities ▾NewsEventsBlog

What do the public want from police? Towards a minimum policing standard

Research team: Professor Ben Bradford, UCL; Dr David Rowlands, University of Leeds; Dr Christine A. Weirich, University of Leeds; and Professor Adam Crawford, Universities of York and Leeds.

Read the report as a PDF \(609KB\)

- This study showed that there is considerable agreement among the public about what service police should provide and on the minimum standards to which police should adhere.
- People take a very process-based approach to questions about ‘what the police are for’ – i.e. they are less exercised about the outcomes police might achieve than the processes through which policing is conducted.
- People feel very strongly that, as a desired minimum, police should be responsive, fair and respectful, as well as engaged and ‘present’.
- The public are clear on the distinctive need for police as a service to respond effectively in moments of danger, risk and uncertainty.
- Generic lists prioritising crimes are not seen as useful for thinking about how police should respond to and protect communities.

Summary

This project explored what the public want and expect from local policing. Adapting a methodology inspired by the ‘minimum income standard’, the team engaged members of the public to develop a ‘minimum policing standard’. This means an established consensus on a set of activities and services that the police should – under normal circumstances – be able to provide to everyone.

Participants identified police as essential first responders to a whole range of situations and were clear on the distinctive need for police to respond effectively in moments of danger, risk and uncertainty. Where this involves crime, police were seen as necessary to resolve the matter. However, participants also identified the need for appropriate third parties to step in, notably in relation to people with vulnerabilities.

Table 1. The minimum policing standard.

Police Service Domains
Response	Behaviour/Treatment	Presence/Engagement
Fast and proportionate response	Building trust	Greater community police presence (including on foot)
Focus on public safety	Treating the public with fairness and respect	Ability to speak directly to a person about local problems
Investigating and solving crimes	Building relationships within the community	Adequate follow-up in the aftermath of crimes
Openness and honesty when dealing with the pubic	Behaving in a professional manner	Responsive to the local community
Following up on crimes	Being role models of good behaviour	Physical local police station
Crime prevention and early intervention	Establish relationships with young people	Local community Police officer
Equal service across groups and places		Engaging in non-traditional types of communication with community

Do people think police are meeting minimum standards of service delivery?

Percentages	Agree or strongly agree	Neither agree nor disagree	Disagree or strongly disagree	Don ´t Know
Response domain
Provide a fast response	43.6%	26.2%	20.4%	9.9%
Prioritise the crimes most affecting your community	25.9%	35.1%	20.4%	18.6%
Provide responses that are proportional to the issues involved	40.8%	28.5%	15.7%	15%
Deal with everyone in the same way	46.1%	20%	19.4%	14.4%
Make an effort to investigate reported crimes	34.9%	27.8%	18.8%	18.8%
Are open and transparent about the decisions they make	31.9%	29.9%	20.6%	17.6%
Provide adequate follow ups after a crime has been reported	32.2%	26.5%	20.3%	21%
Deal effectively with violent crime	40.2%	30.5%	13.5%	15.8%
Behaviour and Treatment Domain
Behave in a professional manner	65.9%	19.6%	8.2%	6.3%
Act in ways that build trust	56.8%	23.3%	12.6%	7.4%
Build relationships with the community	54.5%	23.8%	10.8%	10.9%
Treat people with respect	65.6%	19%	9-4%	6%
Have good relationships with young people	39.7%	29.3%	13.5%	17.5%
		All or most of the time	Not very often or never	Don ´t know
Presence and Engagement Domain
Responsive to local domain		45.4%	34.5%	20.1%
Provide a visible police presence		40.6%	55.6%	3.7%
Available to people who wish to speak to an officer		63.6%	22.8%	13.6%

Table 2. Minimum policing standard domains.

Percentages	Agree or strongly agree	Neither agree nor disagree	Disagree or strongly disagree	Don't know
Response Domain
Prioritise public safety when deciding how to act	36	32	9	23
Provide a fast response	25	29	26	19
Prioritise the crimes most affecting your community	22	32	20	25
Provide responses that are proportionate to the issues involved	28	32	16	24
Deal with everyone in the same way, regardless of who they are	33	24	22	21
Make an effort to investigate crimes reported to them	29	26	26	19
Are open and transparent about the decisions they make	23	33	20	24
Provide adequate follow ups after a crime has been reported	20	29	24	27
Deal effectively with violent crimes	30	29	14	28
Behaviour and Treatment Domain
Behave in a professional manner	62	17	5	16
Act in ways that build trust	45	28	11	16
Build relationships with the community	34	31	17	18
Treat people with respect	51	26	8	15
Have good relationships with young people	23	31	17	30
Provide role models of good behaviour	37	32	13	17
		All or most of the time	Not very often or never	Don't know
Presence and Engagement Domain
Responsive to the local community		40	25	35
Providing a visible policing presence		24	71	6
Available to people who wish to speak to an officer or staff member		29	42	30
Weighted data

Percentages	Agree or strongly agree	Neither agree nor disagree	Disagree or strongly disagree	Don ´t know
Normative alingment
Most police officers have the same sense of right and wrong as I do	45.8%	25%	14.7%	14.5%
Most police officers stand up for values that are important to people like me	52.7%	22.6%	12.6%	12.1%
Duty to obey (high=more)
Back the decisions made by police, even when disagree with them	7-10 (high)	4-6	0-3 (low)	Don ´t know
Do what the police tell you, even if you don´t understand or agree with the reasons?	48%	33.6%	14.8%	3.5%
Do what the police tell you, even if you don´t understand or agree with the reasons	54.8%	32.4%	10%	2.8%
Do what the police tell you even if you don ´t like how they treat you	48.9%	35.6%	13%	2.6%
Overall confidence
How good a job are police doing the local area	Excellent or good 41.9%	Fair 32.8%	Poor or very poor 21.2%	Don ´t know 4.2%

Table 3. Trust, overall confidence and legitimacy.

Percentages

Trust	Agree or strongly agree	Neither agree nor disagree	Disagree or strongly disagree	Don't know
I am comfortable allowing the police to decide how to deal with problems of crime and disorder	61	23	14	2
If I was a victim of a violent crime, I would be content to let the police deal with the matter	75	13	10	2
I am happy to accept the ability of the police to intervene in people's lives	64	24	9	3
Normative alignment	Agree or strongly agree	Neither agree nor disagree	Disagree or strongly disagree	Don't know
Most police officers have the same sense of right and wrong as I do.	44	24	17	15
Most police officers stand up for values that are important to people like me.	47	25	15	14
I generally support how most police officers interact with the people in my area.	50	27	9	13
Duty to obey (to what extent is it your moral duty to ...) (high=more)	More than 3	3 (mid-point)	Less than 3	Don't know
Back the decisions made by police, even when you disagree with them?	36	22	38	4
Do what the police tell you, even if you don't understand or agree with the reasons?	52	20	25	3
Do what the police tell you to do, even if you don't like how they treat you?	44	23	31	3
Overall confidence	Agree or strongly agree	Fair	Poor or very poor	Don't know
How good a job are local police doing	37	45	18	0

Weighted data

Copaganda. Informaciones, ficciones y realidad ficcionada

Sergio García García e Ignacio Mendiola

Los miembros entrevistados de ambos departamentos fueron muy explícitos a la hora de nombrar los objetivos de su trabajo. En primer lugar, su actividad tiene como fundamento el reconocimiento social y la legitimación de la institución policial, algo que llevarían a cabo con éxito (“Somos de las instituciones más apreciadas por la sociedad”, afirmó el representante del CNP; “Si seguimos siendo año tras año la institución más valorada por los españoles es porque algo estamos haciendo bien en comunicación”, afirmó el representante de GC). A través de la exhibición de los aspectos simbólicos más valorados de la actividad policial (grandes operaciones e investigaciones, intervenciones heroicas, exposición de su lado más humano), buscan evitar controversias o coberturas negativas y controlar cada vez más la comunicación de la institución (“Nos gusta supervisarlo todo porque muchas veces los propios de la productora no saben muy bien cómo funcionan nuestras unidades”).